Prince of Denmarke.

Enter Hamlet and the Players.

Ham. Pronounce me this speech trippingly a the tongue as I taught thee,

Mary and you mouth it, as a many of your players do I'de rather heare a towne bull bellow,

Then fuch a fellow speake my lines.

Nor do not faw the aire thus with your hands,

(fellow. But give every thing his action with temperance. Oit offends mee to the foule, to heare a rebuffious periwig

To teare a passion in totters, into very ragges,

To split the cares of the ignoraut, who for the (noifes, Most parte are capable of nothing but dumbe shewes and I would have fuch a fellow whipt, for o're doing, tarmagant

It out Herodes Herod.

players My Lorde, wee have indifferently reformed that among vs.

Ham. The better, the better, mend it all together: There be fellowes that I have seene play, And heard others commend them, and that highly too. That having neither the gate of Christian, Pagan, Nor Turke, have so strutted and bellowed, That you would a thought, some of Natures journeymen Had made men, and not made them well, They imitated humanitie, so abhominable: Take heede, avoyde it.

players I warrant you my Lord.

Ham. And doe you heare? let not your Clowne speake More then is fet downe, there be of them I can tell you That will laugh themselves, to set on some Quantitie of barren spectators to laugh with them, Albeit there is some necessary point in the Play Then to be observed: O tis vile, and shewes A pittifull ambition in the foole that yieth it. And then you have some agen, that keepes one fute Of leafts, as a man is knowne by one fute of Apparell, and Gentlemen quotes his leasts downe F 2
